Once More to the Charge.

The eighth of January approaches, and the country are invited to send their delegates to Frankfort, to prepare for the great contest of the ensuing year. We need not say the business is important; it is always so, but never more so than now. It will be no common contest that will be on hand in 1856. Heretofore the contest has been between two parties, with a common platform on the cardinal doctrines of the country. The first lessons of our fathers both held in veneration. They were not afraid of the Pope, nor of foreigners—no procription for religious opinions; our country the asylum of the oppressed of all nations, was the creed of both parties. They would have resented a charge of opposition to either as an insult. How changed in a few short months! Apprehensions of the Pope and foreigners started bright, eager ladies, and set all the demagogues wild with admiration of the virtues of the new nobility.

This new crop sprung upon the country, and its partial success, is well calculated to alarm the patriot for the stability of our principles. Shall the feuds of race and religion be started and cherished in this country, to hatch out their natural brood of mischief and social, as well as political, calamities? The new party, with its impudent reference to all the patriotism, and its insidious assumption of the name American, is no more monstrous in its object than in its mode of operation. It started in the dark, and shrouds its movements in mystery. Open frankness it repudiates, and makes a virtue of what has been justly considered a reproach.

Besides, we have the old and perilous issue of the slavery question looming up in the distance in dark and forbidding proportions. This question has often been the subject of serious apprehensions; but there is a practical question before us that can neither be evaded nor settled in peace without more wisdom and moderation than usual in the Federal councils. We have now a Congress fiercely and uncompromisingly sectional. The North and South never met on such terms in Congress before; but for the Senate and the Executive we should look to Washington with gloomy forebodings.

It is true, that the old measures that in former years divided the two great parties of the country do not now exist; they have been adjusted, and are not likely to be revived. The new issues are unlike any question heretofore raised in this country. The doctrine promulgated are in opposition to the professed faith of both the old parties. It is gratifying to see the Democratic party standing firmly to their old faiths on these questions; and we are also gratified to see that a large number of our former opponents are, on these new issues, equally true to the professions of their former faith. They are only true to the political faith of their lives in their opposition to these new rights. We hold them as allies in the cause of civil and religious liberty.

These new questions are not those of economy or finance. They concern not a mere difference of opinion as to the rights of the States, or the theory of the Federal Government. They look to radical change of principle; they are revolutionaries. The party that has raised them has adopted the usual machinery of revolution. They are not, in fact, a party, but a conspiracy, with the usual machinery of such movements. They have a constitution, rituals, officers, and sworn subjects. They have their secret councils, and act in all respects as men do who sin at the subversion of established institutions.

The question of slavery this new party is all involved in mystery—pro-slavery South by profession; anti-slavery in the North, whilst the secrecy of puffing continually the Eastern papers toward them and sent in exchange for theirs. Who ever heard of these same Eastern papers “puffing” Western papers, however superior to their own?

The Legislature of Georgia convened at Milledgeville on Tuesday. The State Senate organized by the election of D. J. Bailey (Democrat) as President, and the House organized by the election of Wm. H. Stiles (Democrat) Speaker. The Message of Gov. Johnson occupies eleven columns in the Atlanta Intelligencer, and is entirely too long for us to give a synopsis of it this morning.

We wish we could impress upon our Southern and Western contemporaries, the utter ridiculousness of puffing continually the Eastern papers for us.

The doctrine promulgated are in opposition to the professed faith of both the old parties. It is gratifying to see the Democratic party standing firmly to their old faiths on these questions; and we are also gratified to see that a large number of our former opponents are, on these new issues, equally true to the professions of their former faith. They are only true to the political faith of their lives in their opposition to these new rights. We hold them as allies in the cause of civil and religious liberty.

All that cunning and tact can do to produce confidence in the hope of getting office, will be accomplished.

Such is the condition of the country; and in view of it, we earnestly call upon the Democracy of the country, and those who, upon principle, act with them, to rally to the old cause of the Constitution and the Union. The time is short; let every county send delegates to Frankfort; good and wise men, who understand the issues, and are true to the faith. The coming year will determine a great deal for good or woe in this country. External vigilance is the price of liberty.”

The editor of the Louisville Journal declines the proposition we made him the other day. He will not propose such questions to his party, nor would he, on any account, publish the answers they would give, if they answered at all. He knows his party North are Free-soil, but he intends to support them Free-soil or not. We republish the letter of Gardner, just elected Governor of Massachusetts by the American party, to the Convention that nominated him:

I thank my friends who gave me the opportunity of being the first man in the Philadelphia Convention, from this Commonwealth, after the delegates from the other states had spoken, and after a New York delegate had said, “We shall go to the convention of political parties, and we shall be represented by the people.” I could not acknowledge it as one of the most glorious moments of my life, when I was the first delegate from the North to rise and tell him to his face, “My countrymen from Massachusetts and Connecticut will not be satisfied with that.”

The readers of the Journal will never know the position of Gardner, or the position of his party, for, in the face of this letter, the editor of the Journal says:

The recent elections in New York and Massachusetts have demonstrated the will and ability of the American party to put down the Free-soil organization. There is no room for doubt that the Free-soil party, composed of men in office, and to endeavor to build up a new party, and to get the people to form it, and that these questions already answered, for we find the Free-soil party, in Boston, and elsewhere, in a position of publicanism, basking nobly and successfully on the side of the Union, and of justice to the south.

It certainly requires a hard face to publish such a paragraph in the face of Gardner’s boast to his own friends that he was not only opposed to the policy of the South, but that he was the first to harp defiance in the face of Southern men at the Philadelphia Convention.

We do n’t believe that the editor of the Journal would have brass enough to allude to the American party in Massachusetts if his readers knew the position of Gardner and his party on the slavery question; hence, he will not accept our proposition—not so. He is affiliated with the Know-Nothing-Abolition party of the North, and the less known of them the better. It would not do to have the sentiments of their Congressman and Governor, published in the Louisville Journal, where all the Know-Nothings of Kentucky would see and read them. It would startle some of the brethren. Perhaps they don’t wish to know the truth, having some suspicion that all is not right, or being satisfied that all is wrong, but determined to go it blind.

The Republican editors of Indiana are proposing an Editorial Convention, in order to agree upon some concert of action. Some of the brethren are not satisfied the gathering will do any good, it being too early to fix a programme for next year.

We don’t see what they want concert about. They have a simple course before them. Let them abuse the Democratic party, and misrepresent it to the best of their ability, and have done their part. Consistency in their efforts is of importance.

The Lexington Observer says that Democratic editors know that these Know-Nothings are not patriotic men. He gives us, for one, credit for more knowledge than we possess.

At the municipal election in Chicago, last evening, the Democrats elected their ticket by over three hundred majority. The following notice is to be found in the paper that Sam and Sambo went to the opposition:

The election was decided in quiet. There was a glorious triumph. For several days the Abolition paper heralded that Wilson, Wanghoff, and Van Horn were to be beaten. The paper was an Irish Catholic, and as a man selected by the Democracy to beat the pure and unadulterated names of Wilson and Wanghoff, and as an anti-slavery man, was chosen, and the order was sent out that Wilson was to be elected. The result is told in the paper. The election was given as an anti-Democratic majority of three thousand, yesterday gave to an Irish Catholic, Wilson, a majority of five thousand, and Judge Lyons were the purchasers.

On Sunday, in the Episcopal Church, Lynchburg, Va., the entire congregation retained their seats, as it was understood that a marriage was about to take place. The marriage came off in due time, and the parties proved to be two colored servants, who can boast of having had the largest wedding assemblage ever gotten together in Lynchburg.

THE THEATRE.—The “Hypochondriac” was performed for the first time on Saturday night to a full house. It is very stupid piece—funny to be sure, and laughable; but its funniness is its great stupidity; and we laugh at it on account of its ideas and expressions, as extravagant and far-fetched, and thrown together with a jumble of medical phrases not understood by even one of the professors; it was somewhat qualified to the vulgar too. If the author can do no better, is evident he mistook his calling when he commenced writing for the stage.

To-night we are to have Julia in the Hunchback by Miss Annette Inco, who will make her first appearance before a Louisville audience. We have seen complimentary notices of her in some of our exchanges, but we will wait, as is our custom, until we have had proof to our own senses before we hazard an opinion. Hanley will play as Master Walter, and Ashmer as Sir Thomas Clifford. The afterpiece will be the Widow’s Victim, in which Mrs. Simms will play Jane Chatterly, Mrs. Sardas as Mrs. Rattleton, Benson as Jeremiah, and Ashmer as the victim. The house will doubtless be well filled.

Mr. Barres performed the part of Verigo with great correctness, exhibiting much more talent as an actor than as an author.

The son of Mr. Julius Boetticher, editor of the Indiana Volkblatt, while on a visit to Kentucky, was thrown from a horse, breaking his arm, which injury caused his death.

Ingersoll was conveyed to the West Division Police Station in the Market House, and attended by the same physician who had never spoken, and died about eight o’clock. He was in about the condition of his wife when he was found. Edgar A. Ingersoll, tender of Randolph street bridge, with a pistol shot in his breast, and his wife shot through the heart, stood by the way, with the instant of death in his hand.

Mrs. Ingersoll was taken to the house of Mr. Shaw, corner of Randolph and Peoria streets, where Drs. Freer, Brownell and Hollister were called to her assistance, and at last accounts she was still alive, with a possibility of recovery. She was shot in the left breast between the third and fourth ribs.

Ingersoll was found $33 in gold and a letter, of which the following is a literal copy, and shows that his action was pre-arranged. It was written in pencil on the back of a small piece of paper, and is intended for a brother residing in this city, who has a carriage shop on Canal street.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4, 1855.

DEAR BROTHER CHARLES—I would like very much to see you but time will not permit. I will ask one favor of you and the last. I beg of you to see that Lizzie and myself are Buried and together. I wish you to see that when I die you dash me to pieces and scatter my ashes over the shore. The others determine to remain on the vessel except W. H. Cook, who got into the way, who was shot, and drifted with it to the shore in safety. No one else would venture in it with me.

Capt. Dixon perished Monday afternoon from over fatigue. He was last on the stern, and the stern post was broken, and as he was leaning over the deck, he dashed him to pieces against the vessel, and the survivors could scarcely hold themselves on to the wreck, the mate took the Captain’s money from his pockets and cut the body adrift. It was recovered on the shore. The mate delivered the money into the hands of the Sheriff of the county.

DAILY DEMOCRAT.

[From the Evening Edition.]

From the Troy Whig, Nov. 5.]

A LADY WHO WAS PRESENT AT THE BATTLE OF SARATOGA.—Mrs. Margaret Martin, who is absent at the residence of her grandson, in this city, is 98 years of age. She is one of the few remarkable women of the revolution who took part in the struggle for American independence. Her husband, Gilbert Martin, was a sergeant in the army of Gates, and was engaged in the battle of Saratoga. Mrs. Martin, then a very young woman, was with the soldiers during the engagement, and from them their articles are selected especially for family trade, and purchase may be had upon getting the best in the market.

Mrs. Martin represents the struggle as most terrible. She says that towards evening, when Burgoyne, maddened by the consciousness that all his schemes were about to be defeated, directed his troops to exert every force upon the foible army of the patriots, the contestants stood within half musket range of each other, and poured in their deadly volleys, while both files on either side fell in their tracks, and still neither gave or received a wound.

Toward evening, Mr. Martin was wounded in the shoulder, and while his wife was in the act of affixing a bandage, she herself was wounded in the hand. She says, "Gillies sprang up like a flushed lion," "Peggy said, "He'll go and teach those cowards doge better." "I'll go and teach a woman's—And I saw him no more till the fight was over."

Of such material were the men and women of the revolution.

We can readily imagine that the field of Saratoga was a suitable place for those of "other sort."

Mr. Martin, however, has evidently been a man of uncommon energy of character. His frame still exhibits evidences of strength, and her eye sparkles as she recounts the deeds of those glorious days of which our fathers Gates, who stayed and stoned all day in his tent, and cared not for the men who were falling like sheaves in the harvest."

On the one, the survivors and landmarks of the revolution are fading away.

SCHOOLS.

American Eagle Hall,
JEFFERSON ST., BET. THIRD AND FOURTH.

DANCING ACADEMY.

Mons. J. P. LASSEUR RESPECTfully informs his friends, and the public in general, that he will open his Dancing School at the above address, on the 1st of November, 1853, for Miss Masters, from 9 to 12 o'clock A. M., and 2 to 5 P. M. Classes will be given Monday and Wednesday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock.

P. L. THOMAS is necessary to continue all Dances, and will teach in his school. The great number of pupils he has taught in this city for the past three years, speak well for his skill and power.

Notwithstanding all the Fancy Dances and Waltzes J. P. is acquainted with, he takes pleasure in teaching the simple waltz, and the quadrille, and in his friend Pingala Brins, from the Opera of Paris, and when here the principal branch of Plastic Artistics, which is the waltz, will be taught in possession of the most recent Dances, via:

Varsovian—Hungarian Redowa.

New Polka Redowa.

Ladies and gentlemen wishing to join the class are invited to apply at the commencement.

AYER'S PILLS,

A NEW AND SINGULARLY SU-

CESSFUL remedy for the cure of all bilious diseases

done in every disease in which a purgative medicine is not more or less required.

and suffering might be prevented if a harmless but powerful medicine could be found.

It can well feel with a hostile hold of body preventable.

This new generates serious and often fatal diseases, and is a powerful emetic, and will do away with the vicious use of a good purgative.

This is a true oil of the purest and most delicate.

They all tend to produce or excrete the various derangements.

formidable distempers which load the bowels all over the system, and are the chief cause of many diseases important to the public health, and this Pill has been proved with consummate skill to meet that demand.

An expert physician, and his patients, have shown results surpassing anything ever before seen.

Cures have been effected beyond belief, and they were manifested by persons of such exalted position and character.

Among the many eminent gentlemen who have testified to the efficacy of these Pills we may mention:

H. A. HAYES, Esq., of Boston, and State Assayer of Massachusetts, whose high profession.

How EDWARD EVERETT, Senator of the United States.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives.

DR. JAMES C. MINSTER, Physician to England.

JOHN C. CHILTON, Practical Chemist, of Boston, indorsed by DR. J. C. HARRIS, Secretary of State.

W. M. ASTOR, the richest man in America.

H. L. LEAND & CO., Proprietors of the Metropolitan Hotel.

Did space permit, we could give many hundred certificates from all parts where the Pill has been used, but evidence of its power and value, and the eminent public man is found in their effects upon trial.

These Pills, the result of long investigation and study, are offered to the public as the best and most complete remedy for all bilious diseases.

They are compounded not of the drug themselves, but of the medicinal virtues only of vegetable remedies, extracted by a process of decoction, and then combined together in such a manner as to insure the best effect.

The Pill has been found in the best compounding houses.

It is the most efficient remedy than had hitherto been known.

White is the old mode of composition every man, however, who has studied the art, will be surprised to learn that the composition of this is the most fastidious. If there is any doubt about it, the most trustworthy authority will tell the whole story.

All the patent medicines that are offered are few, and are not so well known.

As it is frequently the case, the most efficacious remedy must be under the counsel of an attending physician.

It is the only judge of a remedy with knowledge of its composition.
